Obama to Boost Border Forces

President to deploy 1,200 troops along the U.S.-Mexico line

Washington

President Obama will send 1,200 National Guard troops to boost security along the U.S.-Mexico border, officials said Tuesday, preempting Republican plans to try to force votes on such a deployment.

Obama will also request $500 million for border protection and law enforcement activities, according to lawmakers and administration officials. The moves come as chances for action on comprehensive immigration reform, Obama's long-stated goal, look increasingly small in this election year. But Obama is under pressure to do something with the issue front and center after Arizona's passage of a tough crackdown law.

The National Guard troops will work on intelligence; surveillance and reconnaissance support; and analysis and training; and will support efforts to block drug trafficking. They will temporarily supplement border patrol agents until Customs and Border Protection can recruit and train additional officers and agents to serve on the border, an administration official said.

In a speech Tuesday on the Senate floor, Arizona Sen. John McCain said the situation on the U.S.-Mexico border has "greatly deteriorated."

The Republican called for a deployment of 6,000 additional National Guard troops and asked for $250 million to pay for them.

"I appreciate the additional 1,200 being sent ... as well as an additional $500 million, but it's simply not enough," McCain said.

Homeland Security and Pentagon officials have been jousting over the possible National Guard deployment for the better part of a year. Pentagon officials worried about perceptions that the U.S. was militarizing the border and did not want Guard troops to perform law enforcement duties.

More than 20,000 Border Patrol agents are deployed in the region now, mostly along the southern border. (AP)

Half of the 70 million Americans with high blood pressure are keeping it under control by taking medication, meeting a government goal set a decade ago, a new study found. In 1988, only about 27 percent of Americans with high blood pressure managed it properly. By 2007-08, that number had climbed to 50 percent, the study said. The findings "should be cause for celebration," although more work needs to be done, said Dr. Aram Chobanian of Boston University. (AP)

A worker shovels oil from the Deepwater Horizon spill at a beach in Port Fourchon, La.

BP Engineers Prep 'Top Kill' Attempt

Experts plan to drop dense mud into the leaking Gulf oil well

Washington

The most critical moment in the oil spill crisis in the Gulf of Mexico is at hand, as BP engineers armed with 50,000 pounds of dense mud and a fleet of robotic submarines are poised to attempt a "top kill" maneuver to plug the leaking well a mile below the surface.

This will be the first attempt to stop outright the flow of oil that has created a vast slick in the Gulf and is now coming ashore and into marshes in Louisiana. Previous efforts by BP since the April 20 blowout on the Deepwater Horizon drilling rig have focused on containing and/or dispersing the oil coming from a collapsed pipe. Those efforts have had limited success.

Now the equipment for the top kill is in place at the sea bottom and engineers are beginning a set of diagnostic tests on the five-story-tall blowout preventer that sits atop the wellhead. By probing conditions inside the blowout preventer, BP will learn how much pressure must be overcome when the drilling mud is injected into the well.

"We've got a crack team of experts that are going to pore over the diagnostic data," said Kent Wells, BP's senior vice president of exploration and production. "There is a remote possibility that we would get some information that it wouldn't work."

Wells said the team, which includes experts from other oil companies as well as government engineers, has been devising the top kill procedure since the very beginning of the crisis.

"It has been done successfully in the past, but it hasn't been done at this depth," Wells said.

GOP, President Face Off

‘Testy’ talks behind closed doors leave senators fuming

Washington

President Obama traveled to Capitol Hill on Tuesday for a rare meeting with Senate Republicans, but the 75-minute session yielded little progress on hot-button topics and left some senators with bruised feelings.

“He needs to take a Valium before he comes in and talks to Republicans,” said Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kansas “He’s pretty thin-skinned.”

Sen. Sam Brownback, R-Kan., described the meeting as “testy.” Others questioned whether the “symbolism” of Obama’s approach matched the actions of his congressional Democratic allies.

In his first meeting with the Senate Republican caucus in a year, Obama came to the Capitol hoping to secure support on a broad range of issues, including immigration. As he left, the president said, “We had a good, frank discussion on a whole range of issues.”

Brownback said Obama explained several times that he was “under pressure from his left” on major issues. Obama asked Republicans to be willing to take some of the same criticism from their right flank in working toward bipartisan accords, other senators said.

Sen. Bob Corker, R-Tenn., still smarting over his failed negotiations with Democrats over the financial regulation bill the Senate approved last week, said he challenged Obama on his request for bipartisan cooperation. He questioned “the audacity” of Obama’s asking for Republican help.

“My question is again: How can you reconcile that duplicity? You say that, but then the big issues have been constructed in such a way to absolutely be partisan,” Corker said. “How can you come in on a Tuesday after [the financial bill vote]?” PAUL KANE AND SHAILAGH MURRAY (THE WASHINGTON POST)

N. Korea Cuts Ties With S. Korea

Relations plunge as Seoul resumes its propaganda offensive

Seoul, South Korea

Relations on the divided Korean peninsula plunged to their lowest point in a decade Tuesday when the North declared it was cutting all ties to Seoul as punishment for blaming the communists for the sinking of a South Korean warship.

The announcement came a day after South Korea took steps that were seen as among the strongest it could take short of military action. Seoul said it would slash trade with the North and deny permission to its cargo ships to pass through South Korean waters. It also resumed a propaganda offensive — including blaring Western music into the North and dropping leaflets by balloon.

North Korea said it was cutting all ties with the South until President Lee Myung-bak leaves office in early 2013, the official Korean Central News Agency said in a dispatch monitored in Seoul late Tuesday.

The North's Committee for the Peaceful Reunification said it would expel all South Korean government officials working at a joint industrial park in the northern border town of Kaesong, and South Korean ships and airliners would be banned from passing through its territory.

The North's committee said it would start "all-out counterattacks" against the South's psychological warfare, and called its moves "the Earlier Tuesday, one Seoul-based monitoring agency reported that North Korea's leader ordered its 1.2 million-member military to get ready for combat.

South Korean officials could not immediately confirm the report, and its military said it had no indication of unusual activity by North Korea's military.

Gunmen Kill 15 People in Brazen Baghdad Jewelry Market Heist

Baghdad

Gunmen wearing Arab headscarves and wielding assault rifles, rocket-propelled grenade launchers and pistols robbed a gold jewelry market in broad daylight Tuesday, killing 15 people in the most brazen example of Baghdad street crime that has soared as sectarian fighting ebbed.

Authorities blamed al-Qaeda in Iraq. "The fingerprints of al-Qaeda are obvious in today's heist," said Maj. Gen. Qassim al-Moussawi, Baghdad's chief military spokesman, speaking a couple hours after the assault.

The heist began when the attackers set off a roadside bomb near the gold shops, killing four bystanders and wounding three, police said. Minutes later, gunmen riding in five or six vehicles swept in,

As one of their vehicles blocked the street to prevent a rescue, the gunmen opened fire on 12 shops, killing nine gold shop owners or their workers and two bystanders, police said. (AP)

Tehran Releases Famed Filmmaker

Opposition supporter is home after two months in custody

Tehran, Iran

Iran released an internationally renowned filmmaker and opposition supporter on bail Tuesday after he spent more than two months in custody, state TV reported.

Jafar Panahi — who has won awards at the Chicago, Cannes and Berlin film festivals — was freed on bail of about $200,000, but the report said his indictment would be sent to a revolutionary court for future action.

The decision came about a week after the 49-year-old filmmaker began a hunger strike to protest his imprisonment. He also demanded to be allowed to see his family, meet with a lawyer and be set free pending trial.

It was unclear what charges Panahi faces. Cases referred to revolutionary courts are usually security related.

ed the filmmaker's Tehran home in early March. A state prosecutor has said Panahi's detention is not political and the filmmaker is suspected of committing unspecified "offenses."

The filmmaker supported Iran's opposition after the disputed June presidential election in which Mahmoud Ahmadinejad was declared the winner. Panahi was briefly detained last summer when he visited the gravesides of the victims of Tehran's postelection unrest and was later banned from traveling abroad. NASSER KARIMI (AP) hold. U.S. authorities say he has been trafficking cocaine to the streets of New York City since the mid-1990s, allegedly hiring island women to hide the drugs on themselves on flights to the U.S.

On Tuesday, masked gunmen in West Kingston vanished down side streets barricaded with barbed wire and junked cars. The sound of gunfire echoed across the slums on Jamaica's south coast, far from the tourist meccas of the north.

Schools and businesses were closed across the capital, and the government appealed for blood donations for the wounded.

Gov. Bob McDonnell said Tuesday that he was unaware of businessman Fred Malek's helping President Richard M. During his monthly appearance on WTOP's "Ask the Governor" radio show, McDonnell defended his selection of Malek — the ex-president of Marriott Hotels and Northwest Airlines, and a longtime major Republican donor and activist — as exactly the kind of proven leader needed to help find ways to make government run better.

"I did not know about this background. But it was 40 years ago; he made a mistake; he's apologized for it," McDonnell said. ROSALIND HELDERMAN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Drivers Uncertain of BP Boycott

Convenience often trumps call to action against Gulf oil spill

Washington

Marco Mora, an auto body shop owner, was driving in Columbia Heights when he realized his Mercedes needed some premium love, so he pulled in under the feel-good green sign marked "BP" and opted for some $3.29-a-gallon Ultimate. Despite calls to boycott the company responsible for the Gulf of Mexico oil spill, Mora never even considered steering clear of BP's gas.

"Of course you feel bad, but it's not only the company's fault," he said. "It's the government's fault. You need to regulate these guys."

At BP stations across the Washington region, customers say the oil spill, now in its second month, is tragic and distressing, but an accident for which they blame other businesses, the federal government and BP. They ask: Why complicate a routine fill-up with political or moral questions?

But organizers of a BP boycott — including Public Citizen, the District-based nonprofit and a Facebook group with more than 75,000 members — say that shopping elsewhere for gas or late-night Twinkies would send the oil company a powerful message.

Public Citizen, founded in 1971 by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, recently launched an online BP Boycott Pledge that has collected more than 11,000 signatures from people promising to forgo all BP products for three months.

It is too soon to tell whether the BP spill will trigger the sustained level of outrage aimed at Exxon in 1989, when one of its tankers ran aground near the Alaskan shore, spilling 11 million gallons of crude into the Prince William Sound.

Some motorists said the spill was not on their minds when they wheeled into a BP station.

"I was on 'E' and I [wanted] to run my air conditioner because it's really hot," said Paulette Washington, who was filling up her Honda at the BP on Wilson Boulevard in Arlington. "It's not like I was, like, 'Let me find a Shell.'"

A Slide Into Uncertainty

Europe's debt crisis has investors rethinking the chances for a global recovery

New York

The Dow Jones industrials plunged below 10,000 to their lowest level of the year Tuesday before a late-day rebound that erased most of the losses if not lingering worries about Europe's continuing debt crisis.

The Dow plunged more than 250 points after the opening bell and stayed under 10,000 most of the day, then charged back to finish down only 22 when signals from Washington suggested banks would not be forced to sell their lucrative derivatives units as part of financial reform. The Standard & Poor's 500 index even managed a slight gain.

But investors are still concerned about European debt, and that's likely to mean more turbulent days like Tuesday. The market worries that even austerity measures by governments there will not be enough to fix the problem and fight off a prolonged economic slump in Europe or even another global recession.

"Market participants feel like they're walking on eggshells," said Oliver Pursche, executive vice president at Gary Goldberg Financial Services in Suffern, N.Y. "Every small piece of potentially bad news is being exaggerated and mentally being fast-forwarded to the worst-case scenario."

Many European countries are imposing budget cuts in a push to control their debt. Investors are concerned that such steps will Fears of the European debt crisis and of escalating tension between North and South Korea helped bring stocks lower Tuesday.

The Debt Panic Scenario

If the trouble starts—and it remains an “if”—the trigger may well be obscure to the concerns of most Americans: a missed budget projection by the Spanish government, the failure of Greece to hit a deficit-reduction target, a drop in Ireland's economic output.

► Why would it affect the U.S.?

The knife-edge psychology currently governing global markets has put the future of the U.S. economic recovery in the hands of politicians in an assortment of European capitals.

► How would it happen? If one or more countries fail to make the expected progress on cutting budgets, restructuring economies or boosting growth, it could drain confidence in a broad and unsettling way. Credit markets worldwide could lock up and throw the global economy back into recession.

► The overall effect: For the average American, that seemingly distant sequence of events could translate into another hit on the 401(k) plan, a lost factory shift if exports to Europe decline and another shock to the banking system that might make it harder to borrow. (THE WASHINGTON POST) stifle economic growth and that the growth of other countries, including the U.S., will inevitably be stunted.

Besides the financial crisis in Europe, investors were reminded that political issues, such as tension between North and South Korea, can threaten economic growth. Analysts said the unresolved Gulf of Mexico oil spill also contributed to the foul mood.

It was enough to send stocks into a deep dive after the opening bell. In just the first half-hour of trading, the Dow sank to 9,774.48, its lowest reading of the year so far.

The market's continuing slide, with frequent triple-digit drops in the Dow, recalls the unrelenting selling of the 2008 financial crash—and begs the question of what can halt the plunge.

Jim Dunigan, managing executive of investments for PNC Wealth Management, said good news about jobs or corporate earnings in the next few weeks could stabilize stocks by signaling that a U.S. recovery is intact.

“You could derail growth in Europe and not derail growth in the United States, but people don't necessary use a lot of logic when they're headed to the exits,” Dunigan said. STEVENSON JACOBS AND TIM PARADIS (AP)

A Shaky Foundation for Recovery

One troubling sign for the recovery of the U.S. economy is the housing market, which continues to falter despite government tax credits and historically low mortgage rates. Home prices fell 0.5 percent in March from February, according to the Standard & Poor's/Case-Shiller 20-city index released on Tuesday. That marks six straight months of declines—a sign that the housing market is going in reverse despite huge price drops. “It looks a little like a double dip already,” said economist Robert Shiller. “There is a very real possibility of some more decline.” (AP)

The International Cycling Union said Tuesday that no riders tested positive for EPO at the 2001 Tour de Suisse, disputing comments disgraced cyclist Floyd Landis made. Michigan Comes Clean On Football Violations

The University of Michigan admitted Tuesday to a series of violations in its storied football program, saying it doesn't believe the problems related to practice time and coaching activities are enough to warrant major punishment from the NCAA. Michigan's proposed sanctions include two years of probation for the football program. The school also said seven people, including football coach Rich Rodriguez, had been reprimanded and another was fired. (AP)

Chill Out — N.J. Wins Super Bowl

Frigid temperatures are in the forecast for 2014's big game

Pro Football

Check the antifreeze, grab the mittens, make sure the airport's not snowed in. We're going to the Super Bowl. In New Jersey. In February!

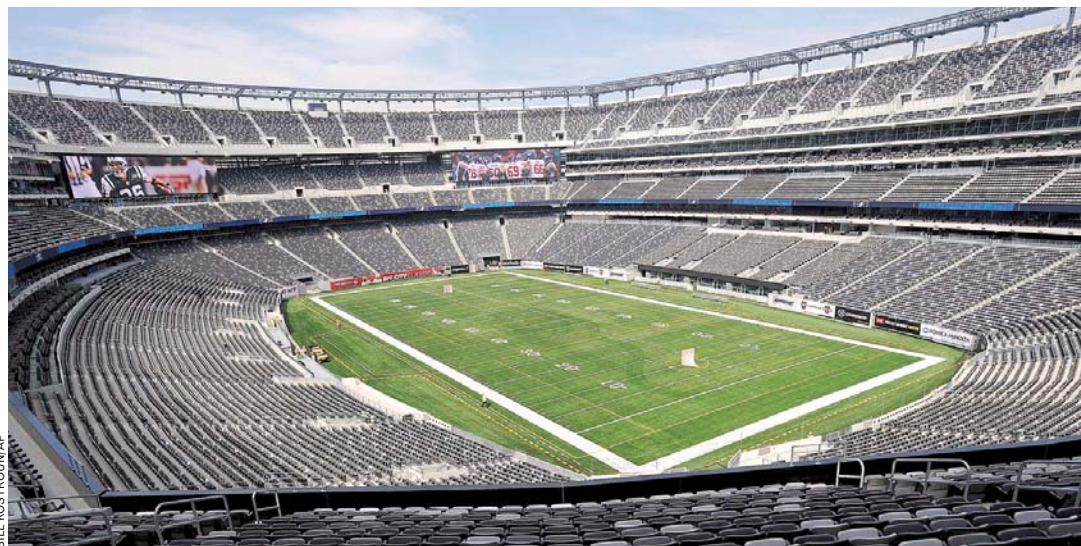

NFL owners voted Tuesday to put the 2014 Super Bowl in the new $1.6 billion Meadowlands Stadium that this season will become home to the New York Jets and Giants. It's the first time the league has gone to a cold-weather site that doesn't have a dome and, until now, those places couldn't even bid on the big game.

The league made an exception for the New York area, and New York only. But just a few years ago, the NHL experimented with an outdoor game on New Year's Day, and it was such a success that teams now fight to host what's become an annual event.

"We believe the owners have the faith in us that 3½ years from now we'll put on a remarkable event," Giants co-owner Jonathan Tisch said on the NFL Network. "The greatest game in the world will be played on the greatest stage in the world."

For all the hoopla of putting the Super Bowl in the Big Apple, it wasn't a slam-dunk. It took four votes by NFL owners to pick New Jersey over two Florida cities, Miami and Tampa. Miami was eliminated after the second ballot.

If the NFL decides to wait and see how this foray into the great outdoors in winter goes, it could be about 2019 or 2020 before the NFL tries again because it takes a year or two to put together a bid for a game that's another four years away.

The new, $1.6 billion Meadowlands Stadium will be the first non-dome to host a Super Bowl in a cold-weather city, in 2014.

"I think Washington should get one, no matter what. It is the nation's capital."

The slogan for New York's bid is "Make Some History." The first piece likely to be made is a record-low temperature at kickoff. The current record is 39 degrees in 1972 at Tulane Stadium in New Orleans, and that would be considered a warm February day in East Rutherford, N.J. There's never been snow in a Super Bowl game, and that could happen, too.

The average temperature range for the Meadowlands area during February is 24 to 40 degrees, with several inches of rain, according to the bid documents. Remember, the game kicks off after sunset in the Eastern time zone, so temperatures would be dropping throughout the night. JAIME ARON (AP)

Backstory

The NFL traditionally has required an average temperature of 50 degrees or a dome for a team to bid on hosting the Super Bowl. The rule was made for the comfort and convenience of fans and players. Neutral conditions, like those in a dome, also are supposed to help the caliber of play. It's been at least 57 degrees for every Super Bowl since 1975, when it was 46. Both that game and the record low of 39 degrees in 1972 were in New Orleans, before the Superdome opened. (AP)

Timeline: Elements of Some Classics

With the game-time temperature at -13 degrees Fahrenheit and a wind chill of about -48 F, the Packers beat the Cowboys for the second-straight year in the NFL championship. The game in Green Bay is known as the Ice Bowl.

1988

Dense fog consumed Chicago's Soldier Field for a playoff game between the Bears and Eagles. With visibility at about 10 to 20 yards, the Bears' defense kept Randall Cunningham and the Eagles out of the end zone in the Fog Bowl.

2002

A thrilling playoff game in the snow at Foxboro became a classic when referees ruled QB Tom Brady tucked the ball rather than fumbled it late in the Patriots' win over the Raiders.

2007

Colts quarterback Peyton Manning overcame a near monsoon in Miami as Indianapolis defeated the Bears to become the first dome team to win a Super Bowl played outdoors.

GROSS OUT

A 21-year-old New Jersey man pleaded guilty Tuesday to intentionally vomiting on a man and his 11-year-old daughter in the stands during the April 14 Philadelphia Phillies-Washington Nationals game. Police say Matthew Clemmens of Cherry Hill, N.J., stuck his fingers down his throat and vomited on Easton police Capt. Michael Vangelino and his daughter after Clemmens' companion was ejected from the park. Sentencing is set for July 30. (AP)

Andy Roddick raises his fist after defeating Jarkko Nieminen on Tuesday in Paris.

Roddick Avoids Early Exit in Paris

U.S. star overcomes past failures to win opener in five sets

Tennis

Andy Roddick slipped, then kicked the dirt. He chirped at the umpire about a call. When an unlucky bounce cost him a key point, he waved his arms in disgust. And at the finish, he raised his fist to celebrate a French Open triumph.

Roddick's clay-court season began Tuesday, and he endured repeated frustrations on his worst surface before rallying past Jarkko Nieminen in the first round, 6-2, 4-6, 4-6, 7-6 (4), 6-3.

The match was Roddick's first on clay since he lost in the fourth round at Roland Garros last year.

“There was a lot of ugliness out there today," he said. "But, you know, at the end of it, I get to play again. You go into a day hoping to get through a day, and I got through today."

Seeded sixth, Roddick barely avoided losing his opening French Open match for the fifth time. Instead, he earned his first five-set win in the tournament since 2001, the first year he competed, when he beat Michael Chang in the second round.

No. 2-seeded Rafael Nadal began his bid for a fifth French Open title by beating 18-year-old wild card Gianna Mina of France, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2. The match was the first for Nadal at Roland Garros since he lost to Robin Soderling in the fourth round last year. Also, Justine Henin took a big step in her return from retirement, beating Tsvetana Pironkova 6-4, 6-3. (AP)

Awkward Timing for D.C., Milan

United stumbles into exhibition against its exhausted, famed foe

Soccer

There was a time when D.C. United could step onto the field with a global power such as Real Madrid or Chelsea and represent the best that American professional soccer had to offer. That time is long gone.

Now, as United finds itself on the verge of a historically bad season, it will once again represent Major League Soccer in an exhibition against one of the world's most renowned clubs: AC Milan. But a 1-8-0 league record and an inept offense that's produced only four goals inspire little confidence.

Instead, D.C. will hope to avoid embarrassment Wednesday night at RFK Stadium, while fans fed up with United can thank Brazil coach Dunga for leaving Milan's renowned Ronaldinho off the World Cup team. With the hosts on a 326-minute scoreless streak, the 30-year-old midfield maestro may be the game's best hope for a goal.

Milan has also fallen on hard times, by its lofty standards. It finished third in the Italian league season that ended two weeks ago and had to watch city rival Inter win the European title. Although it hasn't won a major trophy since 2007, Milan remains Europe's second-most decorated club with seven continental and four world titles. It boasts World Cup vets Clarence Seedorf of Holland, Filippo Inzaghi of Italy, and D.C. native and U.S. national team defender Oguchi Onyewu, but he's preparing for the World Cup and will miss Wednesday's game.

Ex-FIFA player of the year Ronaldinho may offer the best chance at a goal Wednesday.

ANTONIO CALANNI/AP

So, the timing is awkward for both clubs. At the conclusion of a nine-month season, Milan's players likely long for a rest. United's beleaguered players are hoping for a break as well — one that goes their way. A strong effort against a famous foe may lift their confidence.

Said D.C.'s Chris Pontius: "This game will be another excellent test for us and will give the club a chance to face top-level talent as we try to better ourselves." BRIAN STRAUS

Geek Philosophy

Pad Power

I've never been one to jump on the Apple-cart, so no one was more surprised than I when I opened up my wallet and decided to buy an iPad.

For a while now, I'd been looking for a convenient way to surf the Internet from my sofa, a better way to check game scores and news headlines during commercial breaks. My laptop takes an eternity to boot up and, frankly, it just isn't friendly enough for the living room anyway. Smartphones — I've lived with both a BlackBerry and a Sidekick — are decent enough for a quick flick of the Web. But every time I click on a story for more details, they torture me with tiny screens and endless clicking just to page through a single article.

Enter the iPad, overpriced yet irresistible nonetheless. Screw all the apps: The one thing the iPad does exceptionally well is make the Internet truly portable, a first for any gadget. There are some considerable design flaws — despite its price and processing power, the iPad won't let you completely dump your PC or laptop. Nevertheless, it's one tasty bite of the Apple.

Record-Breaking Win

Tina Fey will be the youngest person to snag the Twain Prize for American Humor

Awards

Tina Fey can dust off another place on her trophy shelf. The Kennedy Center announced Tuesday that the comedian will receive this year's Mark Twain Prize for American Humor.

And before anyone asks, let's settle the question of honoring someone who's a mere 40 years old. "It does change the paradigm a bit," said Mark Krantz, co-executive producer of the Twain salute. Fey is the youngest recipient in the award's 13 years. "A lot of people felt it was a lifetime achievement award for an old person. It never has been. It is a prize, really, about somebody's depth and talent."

Fey's response to being chosen illustrates why audiences love this writer and actress. She said: "I assume Betty White was disqualified for steroid use."

"Like Mark Twain, Tina Fey offers her brilliance unconditionally," said David M. Rubenstein, the center's chairman. "Throughout her career, she's earned legions of fans for her quick, unapologetic wit and social commentary."

Fey, a 1992 graduate of the University of Virginia, honed her skills with the Second City improv troupe in Chicago, following the likes of John Belushi, Gilda Radner and Mike Myers. For nine years, Fey was part of the "Saturday Night Live" skit

"She's politically conscious, she's a writer, she's a filmmaker, she's a producer, she's a performer. Her body of work is as inclusive and far-reaching as anyone else's, and she's just funny."

— MARK KRANTZ, CO-EXECUTIVE PRODUCER OF THE TWAIN SALUTE.

At the ripe old age of 40, comedian Tina Fey is the 14th recipient of the prestigious Mark Twain Prize for American Humor.

laboratory, becoming the first female head writer for the show.

Since 2006 Fey has been the executive producer and a cast member of "30 Rock," NBC's showbiz comedy. Her work on the show has brought her an Emmy, two Golden Globes and four Screen Actors Guild Awards. Fey joked about its mediocre ratings, however, at the Emmys ceremony in 2009, when the show won for Outstanding Comedy Series. She thanked its "dozens and dozens of viewers."

Her portrayal of Sarah Palin during the 2008 presidential campaign pulled Fey right back into the "SNL" fold and brought her an Emmy. Although the former Alaska governor has had harsh words for Fey and other entertainers who have been critical of her, she also tried to win points as a good sport by appearing on "SNL" during the height of the Fey-as-Palin craze.

Previous winners are Carl

Reiner, Whoopi Goldberg, Richard Pryor, Neil Simon, Lily Tomlin, Bill Cosby, Billy Crystal, Jonathan Winters, Bob Newhart, Lorne Michaels, Steve Martin and George Carlin.

The award will be presented Nov. 9 and televised at a later date. Krantz said he is expecting an all-star lineup of guests. "She is at her apex," Krantz said, "and that's interesting." JACQUELINE TRESCOTT (THE WASHINGTON POST)

A Ride on an Old 'Stagecoach'

This early western is a Ford-Wayne film of the must-see ilk

DVD Review

"Stagecoach" is one of those movies that most students of cinema feel obligated to watch because of its historical significance. It marked director John Ford's first western to feature sound, his first collaboration with John Wayne and the first appearance on-screen of the soon-to-be-iconic landscapes of Utah's Monument Valley.

But here's the best reason to visit (or revisit) this 1939 horse-and-buggy adventure, released Tuesday on DVD and Blu-ray (both $40) by the Criterion Collection: More than 70 years since its release, it remains a beautifully shot, flat-out great motion picture.

Wayne and Claire Trevor in "Stagecoach."

UNITED ARTISTS

While undeniably a western by definition, what makes "Stagecoach" so compelling is that it transcends its genre, acting as both a character study of the relationships between a socially mismatched crew of stagecoach passengers, and an action movie.

As for extras, Ford fans may get a kick out of his often cantankerous behavior in an hour-long 1968 interview with British journalist Philip Jenkinson. A similarly candid glimpse of Ford also can be found in a brief collection of home movie clips narrated by the filmmaker's grandson, Dan Ford. A featurette on stuntman Yak Canutt merits a look, as does the rarely seen "Bucking Broadway," a 1917 silent John Ford feature starring Harry Carey. JEN CHANEY (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Miranda, Carrie, Samantha and Charlotte strut their stuff in "Sex and the City 2."

An Experience With Hot Couture

Q&A

Trekking through the sand dunes of the Sahara atop a camel wearing vintage Dior and ultra-high stilettos was just another day on set for Sarah Jessica Parker in "Sex and the City 2."

The latest installment in the popular franchise, in theaters Friday, finds the New York fashionistas — Parker's Carrie Bradshaw and her best girls, Charlotte, Samantha and Miranda — vacationing in the Middle East. And costume designer Patricia Field once again outfitted the ladies in the latest trends.

The film's stars — Parker, Kim Cattrall, Cynthia Nixon and Kristin Davis — admit that donning couture in the Moroccan desert, which stands in for Abu Dhabi, had its challenges.

What was it like wearing these fabulous clothes in the Sahara?

SARAH JESSICA PARKER: I know it was hard work and I know it was hot and I know it was constantly challenging to us, but what I recall is this amazing, once-in-a-lifetime experience. So, did we have to wear heels in the dunes of the Sahara? Yeah! Is that ridiculous? Absolutely! Did I run toward it? You bet! 'Cause when is that ever going to happen again?

How was sharing the scene with a camel?

KIM CATTRALL: It was hot, but now I can say that I have ridden a camel in the Sahara. That camel had a mind of its own, so it was a little scary at moments.

What was the toughest scene to shoot in couture?

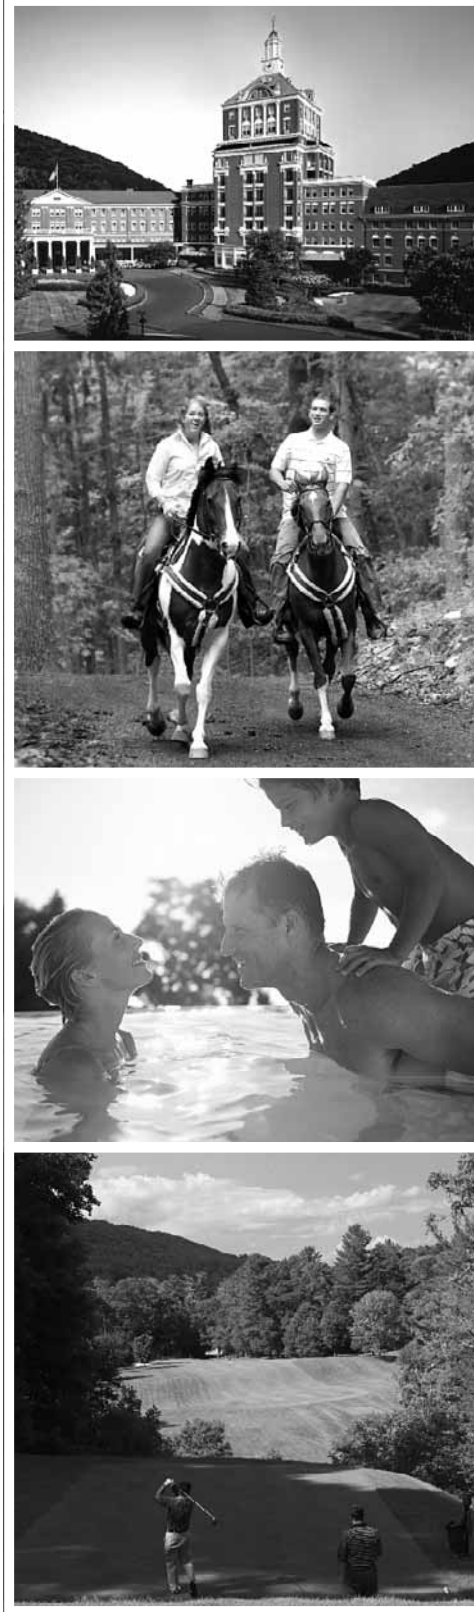

KRISTIN DAVIS: We were somewhat unprepared for the souk cobblestone, which are hundreds and hundreds of years old and sloped. And we're wearing the highest shoes we could find. My feet and my ankles are not the same as they used to be — there'd be times when your feet would look like somebody took out a cleaver and hit at them for awhile.

NICOLE EVATT (AP)

Music Beat

What a Showstopper: Christina Aguilera feels she needs more time to prepare for her upcoming tour, so she has postponed it. A statement from the singer's rep says the summer tour has been moved to 2011 because she is busy with her debut film, "Burlesque," and her new album, "Bionic." The film is due out in November, the album on June 8. The 20-city tour was to start July 15. (AP)

‘Jersey Shore’ fans flock to the Garden State’s seaside sights

Destinations

Over here is the bar where Snooki was decked by a sucker punch to the face. Around the corner is the house with the most famous garage door in America, painted in the colors of the Italian flag with a map of New Jersey superimposed over it. Up top is the deck where Ronnie and Sammi fought when he said she had a “Flintstones toe,” and a few blocks away is the nightclub where Tourists take a photo at the house where the “Jersey Shore” cast stayed.

Your ‘Situation’

Want to live the GTL (gym-tan-laundry) lifestyle? You can rent the house where the cast members stayed, at 1209 Ocean Terrace. But it has to be during the week; weekends are booked through the end of the summer. It rents for $1,800 to $6,000 per night —duck phone included. (AP)

Snooki did so many backflips that her underpants got nearly as much camera time as her face. The Jersey shore has always been a top vacation destination.

But this year, the “Jersey Shore” Jersey shore has become a destination in its own right as fans of the MTV reality series descend on the Garden State to experience the same sights, sounds and smells as “The Situation,” Sammi “Sweetheart,” Pauly D and the rest of the cast. Dawn Sitler drove from Fort Hood, Texas, to Seaside Heights, N.J., to pose for a photo in front of the garage door featured in each episode of the show. “It’s where we want to come back to and party,” said the 42-year-old former New Jersey resident. “This is a good place to come to have fun.” Not everyone loves “Jersey Shore.” Italian-American groups say it perpetuates negative stereotypes of Italians and gives the region a bad image — even though only one of the cast members, Sammi Giancola, is actually from New Jersey. But love it or hate it, the show has created a buzz that put Seaside Heights on the worldwide map. With a name like Maria Maruca, the head of the borough’s tourism office could be a cast member. Toasted Marshmallow Milk Shake

"This shake is undeniably delicious, but I had no idea it would become, in fact, legendary. We thought of the idea because we're huge marshmallow freaks in my family. Not only is the flavor like a campfire in your mouth, but it evokes those same childhood memories of indulgence and misbehavior! We get mad love for this shake."

Ingredients

- 1 16-ounce bag jumbo marshmallows
- 2 cups whole milk
- 2 cups creamy vanilla ice cream
- 1 tablespoon sour cream

Serves 4

Preheat the broiler. Reserve four marshmallows for garnish. Spread out the remaining marshmallows on a baking sheet in a single layer. Place the sheet under the broiler and cook, stirring once or twice, until completely charred, two to three minutes. Remove from the oven and set aside to cool.

Repeat with the remaining four marshmallows, but cook just until toasted slightly golden, about one minute. Remove from the oven and set aside to cool.

Add the milk, ice cream, sour cream and burnt marshmallows to a blender. Blend for five minutes.

Pour into four 8-ounce glasses and garnish each glass with a golden marshmallow.

Make sliders so that people can try more options. Change up the meat. You could do turkey for people who don't want beef. Do a few that are classic, then a few off the beaten path. So, you could offer a regular cheeseburger, bacon cheeseburger and one or two more interesting choices. People love the Smokehouse Burger at Good Stuff. It's a bacon cheeseburger topped with fried Vidalia onions. Just don't overwhelm yourself.

What's the secret to a great shake?

One hundred percent, it's the ice cream. The ice cream you find at the store is OK. It'll taste good, but here at Good Stuff, we sell thousands of shakes that we make from our own house-made custard. It's super-thick, creamy and fat. If you can find great custard with high quality, start with that. Second, a lot of people use blenders to make shakes, but blenders cause friction, so you end up with a watery shake. I recommend handheld Hamiltons.

Can you describe your favorite lunch?

These days, it's a piece of pizza in planning for my next restaurant. To be honest with you, I am more of a brunch person. My ideal is usually fresh cheese, bread, some cold cuts, cornichons, mustard and a tomato salad with lots of olive oil and balsamic. I don't sit down to a big lunch meal. I like to pick a few different things.

What's next for you?

It's all pizza. We're working on perfecting the crust right now for our new restaurant, We the Pizza, which should open this summer. We will serve homemade sodas and gelato. After that, I want to open more Good Stuff and more We the Pizzas. Then, who knows? A taqueria, a Vietnamese-style restaurant, French bistro. Who knows? ERIN HARTIGAN

Spike Mendelsohn's Farmhouse burgers, top, are beloved by Good Stuff Eatery patrons; his grandfather liked them with cheese.

Meat Whisperer

D.C. burger overlord Spike Mendelsohn shares his wisdom

Q&A

Ever since wowing audiences on season four of Bravo's "Top Chef," Spike Mendelsohn has been busy clogging fans' arteries with unapologetically fatty fare. He serves up his signature burgers and shakes at Capitol Hill's Good Stuff Eatery, and just debuted "The Good Stuff Cookbook" ($25, Wiley). We got him to slow down long enough to spill a few meaty secrets.

What prompted you to write this cookbook?

I always wanted to give people tips on how to do good burgers and cool shakes. The book does that, and it's got a bit of history from my family, a bit of how I got into the business and my transition from fine dining to burgers. It's an homage to everyone who's been involved and important to me.

Where did you source the recipes?

Almost everything from the book comes from when I was growing up as a child. The recipes have a familiar flavor profile. Some were inspired from family members who used to make it that way. There are also some from friends I worked with or who are part of the business.

How can home cooks duplicate a great burger?

The number one thing is fresh ingredients. Start with a good blend of fat content in the meat to get good flavor. Then you make the burger better with good toppings.

After that, think about cool flavors and textures. The final thing would be the type of cheese that you use and the bread.

How do you top your burgers?

I'm a simple guy. When it's just me on my own, I love a bacon cheeseburger with American cheese. If I had to pick an original from Good Stuff Eatery, I'd have to pick the Obama burger, which is pretty delicious. It has onion marmalade and horseradish mayonnaise.

What's the secret to hosting a good burger party?

If you're making different toppings, work ahead and do things that morning or the day before so that you're not scrambling when your friends arrive. Give people unexpected choices, different cheeses, buns, maybe a marmalade.

What are the "must-haves" for a good burger bar?
